FOREWORD

The 1968-69 NASPA Directories constitute a continuing service project of NASPA through the Commission for Association Personnel and Services.

The Directories seek to facilitate knowledge of and contact with professional and student organizations. The listings represent an effort to identify all the major organizations. However, the compilation is not complete for the changing nature of groups, among other reasons, precludes a total and accurate directory.

Thomas Emmett of Higher Education Executive Associates has been the editing force behind the Directories publication. Credit and appreciation are due Mr. Emmett.

Richard Siggelkow, editor of the NASPA Journal, and his staff deserve thanks for their technical assistance with this publication.

Membership: (All CAUSPS Associations) – 485

Description and Objectives:

The Council of Associations of University Student Personnel Services is a Council of the various Associations that deal with students and student personnel services in Colleges and Universities in Canada. Founded through the efforts of advisers to student veterans in 1946 as the University Counselling and Placement Association, C.A.U.S.P.S. has expanded to three autonomous associations working within the Council. Provision has been made for the addition of new Associations as the need arises. Meanwhile the Student Affairs Association welcomes to its membership those administrators of student affairs whose main responsibilities are other than counselling or placement.

Publications:

"The Journal" was founded in 1964 and has editorial connections with the NASPA Journal. The Journal is the official publication of the Council and publishes information related to all of the affiliated associations. Associations within the Council also publish various newsletters, books and papers related to their specific fields.

Conferences:

Dr. Earle W. Clifford, University Dean for Student Affairs, Rutgers University, New Brunswick, New Jersey 08903

In April 1958, the Inter-Association Coordinating Committee consisting of representatives of four professional associations dealing with student personnel services in colleges and universities was organized to serve the following proposed objectives: to examine the purposes, functions, and accepted responsibilities of each association; to define areas of common interest; to identify areas most appropriate for mutual and cooperative efforts among the associations; and to identify areas that should be regarded as reciprocal in terms of mutual service. At the organization meeting of this committee in St. Louis on April 1 and 2, 1958, representatives of the coordinating associations accepted their primary concern the following statement:

(a) Identifying the most pressing issues and problems in the college student personnel field, particularly those of long-range import and those accentuated by curricular and enrollment complexities; and

(b) Developing working agreements among professional associations as to the particular problems which might be given primary research and program emphasis by each and concerning those problems on which two or more of the associations might work cooperatively in the years ahead.

Since that time the number of constituent associations has been increased to twelve and three affiliates. In December of 1963, at a meeting sponsored by the American Council on Education, the name of the Committee was changed to Council of Student Personnel Associations in Higher Education.

Much of the work of the Council is carried out through Commissions.

Current Commissions are as follows for 1968-1969:

Description and Objectives:

According to the Association's constitution – "The purpose of this Association is to provide an organization in which institutions of higher education and interested individuals may work together to promote health in its broadest aspects for students and all other members of the college community."

Meetings of ACHA and its regional affiliate associations provide the principal opportunities for those interested and concerned with the health of college students to meet, exchange information about their unique problems and procedures, and up-grade standards of college health and medical care. Special interest sections exist in Administration, Clinical Medicine, Mental Health, Athletic Medicine, Health Education, Environmental Health and Safety, and Nursing Care.

The Association conducts periodic surveys and studies on college health, and research in various aspects of college medicine. The ACHA maintains liaison with many other national health and educational organizations through Joint Liaison Committees and other means. Active liaison relationships exist with the American Medical Association, ACPA, the Council of Student Personnel Associations in Higher Education, the Peace Corps, the Public Health Service, the Office of Education, the Social and Rehabilitation Service (DHEW), the National Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association. ACHA is a member of the American Council on Education, the National Interagency Council on Smoking and Health, the National Collegiate Athletic Association, and the American National Committee on Health Education of the Public. The Association, through its publications and annual meetings, informs its members of these activities.

The Association has published Recommended Standards and Practices for a College Health Program and Ethical and Professional Relationships for the use of college administrators, state legislators and accrediting agencies. These may be obtained by writing the Association office. Also obtainable are documents on student housing, nursing standards, health education and accident reporting. Some building plans for college health services are available. Upon request, institutions will be sent lists of applicants for college health work and individuals will be informed of job opportunities in the field of college health. Colleges may also apply for Certification surveys of their health services, or for consultation on specific health problems.

Membership: 1735

Description and Objectives:

Historically, counseling psychology as a specialty within the broad area of applied psychology has drawn upon three distinct but related movements: vocational guidance, psychological measurement, and personal development. The counseling psychologist works in a wide range of settings, emphasizing such positive mental health functions as clarification of self-concept, attainment of vocational maturity and optimal self-realization.

Consonant with the over-all objectives of the American Psychological Association, the purpose of this Division is to bring together psychologists specializing in counseling psychology and to further the development of the field of counseling psychology in:

a. Education and Training, through formulation of requirements for the scientific and professional education and training of specialists in counseling psychology.

b. Scientific Investigation, through encouraging surveys of research, identifying problems in need of research, and encouraging research by members of the division.

c. Practice, through extending the application of the science of psychology to counseling, promoting high standards of competence in practice, and encouragement of appropriate and ethical patterns of practice.

d. Dissemination of Information, through scientific meetings, critical reviews, publications of technical and professional materials, and promotion of public understanding of counseling psychology.

Description and Objectives:

To provide opportunity for unions to cooperate in advancing their union programs.

The Role of the College Union: (A statement of purpose, adopted by the Association General Membership at the National Conference, April, 1956) –

"The union is the community center of the college, for all the members of the college family – students, faculty, administration, alumni and guests. It is not just a building; it is also an organization and a program. Together they represent a well-considered plan for the community life of the college.

"As the 'living room' or the 'hearthstone' of the college, the union provides for the services, conveniences, and amenities the members of the college family need in their daily life on the campus and for getting to know and understand one another through informal association outside the classroom.

"The union is part of the educational program of the college. As the center of college community life, it serves as a laboratory of citizenship training students in social responsibility and for leadership in our democracy. Through its various boards, committees, and staff, it provides a cultural, social, and recreational program, aiming to make free time activity a cooperative factor with study in education. In all its processes it encourages self-directed activity, giving maximum opportunity for self-realization and for growth in individual social competency and group effectiveness. Its goal is the development of persons as well as intellects.

"The union serves as a unifying force in the life of the college, cultivating enduring regard for and loyalty to the college."

Description and Objectives:

The Council is a non-profit corporation serving the eight Regional Placement Associations of the United States and Canada with respect to those functions where coordinated effort is to be exercised on a national or international level. The meetings of the Associations themselves serve as a medium for the exchange of information among college placement directors and the personnel officers of business, industry, and government who constitute their membership. The Council, made up of the president, a college representative, and an employer representative of each of the Associations, establishes policy for the permanent staff which has facilities for publishing, research, automated information retrieval, principles and practices, and for inter-organizational cooperation.

Periodical Publications:

The Journal of College Placement – four times in the college year to placement directors and employer representatives recruiting college graduates for business, industry, and government.

The College Placement Annual – yearly to graduating seniors and alumni seeking employment through college placement offices.

The Salary Survey – reports issued three times in the college year on current beginning salary offers made to students on all three degree levels.

Directories, manuals, and other auxiliary material published also.

Other Services:

GRAD System – Computerized information retrieval system to assist college placement offices in matching alumni with suitable employment opportunities.

Related Organizations:

The College Placement Services, Inc., which shares offices with the College Placement Council provides assistance to predominantly Negro colleges in the establishment or upgrading of placement activities on these campuses.

Open to all persons who are either teaching or engaged in administrative work in institutions of higher education or whose major professional activity is in or closely related to higher education and who are members of the National Education Association. No additional dues shall be required. However, in some states membership in state associations is involved.

Purposes:

The American Association for Higher Education is a professional organization of faculty members, administrators, trustees, graduate students, and others concerned with American higher education.

The purposes of the Association are to advance the professional development of those engaged in higher education and to help in making colleges, universities, and related agencies increasingly effective in their service to society. The American Association for Higher Education is unique among national associations in this field in that it brings together, on an individual basis, interested persons from the several disciplines and types of colleges and universities as well as others who seek to extend and improve higher education. Membership is on an individual, not an institutional, basis.

Publications:

College and University Bulletin, including "So They Say," reviews of books and magazine articles, published biweekly during the academic year, Current Issues in Higher Education, selected papers from the AAHE Annual National Conference on Higher Education.

Editor of the Junior College Journal – Roger Yarrington, AAJC, 1315 16th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036

Membership: 765

Description and Objectives:

The American Association of Junior Colleges, a nonprofit educational organization, was established in 1920 to represent the interests, stimulate the professional development, and promote the sound growth of America's community and junior colleges.

Representing more than 750 member institutions that vary widely in purpose, type, control, and location, the American Association of Junior Colleges voices the interests of junior college education as a whole, rather than the interest of any particular geographic area or type of junior college institution. Through Association membership, these institutions are united in the interest of professional advancement.

The responsibilities of the Association have grown both in depth and scope since its establishment. The Association carries on a variety of programs and offers many services to its members through an organizational framework that includes the Board of Directors, commissions, Council on Research and Service, and headquarters staff in Washington, D.C. AAJC provides consultant and information services; stimulates research; plans conferences, workshops, and an annual convention to consider junior college development; and engages in national projects on various problems and issues.
